WASHINGTON CENTER FOR
Equitable Growth

RESEARCH ON TAP · DRINKS DIALOGUE DEBATE

What Is Research on Tap?

Research on Tap is Equitable Growth's marquee event series: a space for drinks, dialogue, and debate about the biggest forces shaping the U.S. economy.

About the Series

Each Research on Tap brings together leading scholars, policymakers, journalists, and advocates for a lively, informal discussion of new research and what it means for economic policy. Past events have explored gender wage inequality, economic mobility and the impact of race and place, competition and antitrust, and how climate change, generative AI, and racial inequality are reshaping the economy. Events are held in Washington, D.C., with a livestream for those who can't attend in person.

Why It Benefits the Community

Research on Tap makes rigorous economic research accessible and social. By pairing evidence with open conversation in a relaxed setting, the series builds connections across the research, policy, advocacy, and media communities. Those relationships help good ideas travel from academic papers into real-world policy that supports strong, broadly shared growth.

Get Involved

Visit equitablegrowth.org to find upcoming Research on Tap events and watch past conversations.

www.equitablegrowth.org

601 13th St NW, 12th Floor
Washington, D.C. 20005

(202) 545-6002

equitablegrowth.bsky.social
equitablegrowth
washington-center-for-equitable-growth @equitablegrowth